Not all that many people in this country were willing to listen to the kind of music Duck [Donald] wanted to play. So he didn't make a lot of money from doing what he loved. It's good to remember, now, that other people feel the same way about their music as he did. They, too, might not make a lot of money. But if they are willing to hold on to their passion—if they are not willing to sell out for a quick buck, or, indeed, for anything—they will die as Duck did, knowing he lived out his own life, ultimately, the way he wanted. It's good to remember, now, that some people are still willing to take that chance today.
